Mustafa Kemal Atatürk was not widely known when he led the national resistance movement in Anatolia in 1919 however the effort and attention that his government devoted to the creation of his public image gradually turned him into a superhuman figure in the eyes of many film played a crucial role in the creation and dissemination of this image and helped Atatürk to advance his project of building a new imagined community of the Turkish nation. But despite the impact of film and film making on the political and cultural life of early republican Turkey there is almost no research that has analysed this footage. Atatürk on screen uncovers various film archives to reveal the significant albeit paradoxical role of film during this period. Enis Dinç shows that film making was crucial for the creation of Atatürk's public image and the presentation of Turkey's new modern image to the world. It also posed risks as it could be reused and re-framed for the purposes of counter-propaganda. The main analysis in the book is of the film footage itself including rare contemporary cinematic sources which have never received comprehensive analysis. Before the book also makes use of other primary sources such as letters, memoirs, newspapers, reports, newsletters and production files providing readers with a multi-layered account of the period. Genomic and precision medicine translation and implementation highlights the various points along the continuum from health to disease where genomic information is impacting clinical decision making and leading to more personalization of health care. Along with lessons learned loss and consequent grief permeates nearly every life changing event from death to health concerns to dislocation to relationships breakdown to betrayal to natural disaster to faith issues yet while we know about particular events of loss independently we know very little about a psychology of loss that draws many adversities together this universal experience of loss as a concept in its own right sheds light on so much of the work we do in the care of others. This book develops a new overarching framework to understand loss and grief. Taking into account both pathologial and wellbeing approaches to the subject drawing on international and cross disciplinary research. Judith Murray highlights nine common themes of loss helping us to understand how it is experienced these themes are then used to develop a practice framework for structuring assessment and intervention systematically throughout the book. This generic approach is highlighted through discussing its use in different loss events such as bereavement trauma, chronic illness and with children or older people having been used in areas as diverse as child protection, palliative care and refugee care. The framework can be tailored to a range of needs and levels of care caring for people experiencing loss is an integral part of the work of helping professions. Whether it is explicitly part of their work such as in counselling or implicit as in social work. the belief that many of our problems arise from the essential paradoxes of human existence rather than personal pathology this book presents the regenerative leadership framework that has emerged from doctoral research and consulting work with successful sustainability leaders and their organizations in business education and community the framework synthesizes the levels of awareness the leadership styles and behaviours and the organizational arrangements that correlate most significantly across these domains most importantly the overwhelming majority of the leaders in this work agree that individual and collective consciousness development is critical to transforming the culture of organizations for sustainability and beyond the term regenerative has not been chosen arbitrarily but to provide an alternative to the notion of sustainability which many of the leaders featured here indicate has become insufficient to describe what needs to be done economically socially and environmentally if we are to ensure a flourishing world for present and future generations this work in turn has led to the development of the regenerative capacity index rci a tool designed to assess an organization s readiness to engage in regenerative practice from this evaluation of an organization s regenerative capacity it becomes possible to design a strategy for regeneration that considers all levels of its environmental social and economic impact both internally and externally in the local and global community among its major findings the book argues that the more evolved sustainability leaders are becoming increasingly dissatisfied with the construct of sustainability and indicate the need for a profound cultural shift towards regenerative human systems in this framework regenerative organizations are driven by a sense higher purpose and leadership is exercised horizontally and collaboratively leaders and followers engage in generative conversations to create desirable futures which are then backcasted to eliminate unanticipated consequences throughout leaders emphasize the critical importance of engaging in personal and collective consciousness development or inner work in order to make regenerative practices possible this is a first edition core text for freshman sophomore level courses on international relations the second largest course market in political science introduction to international politics courses typically have multiple goals on the one hand instructors seek to introduce students to the discipline through readings and discussions of foundational theoretical perspectives and ongoing debates on the other hand instructors seek to help students become informed participants in policy debates about foreign policy and international politics issues by highlighting pressing contemporary issues effectively addressing both concerns requires more than simply including both topics in the course syllabus or in a textbook it requires making systematic linkages between theory and policy this is a long standing challenge in international politics one raised many years ago by alexander george in bridging the gap in which
