The lost world is a novel released in 1912 Arthur Conan Doyle concerning an expedition to a plateau in South America where prehistoric animals, dinosaurs, and other extinct creatures still survive. The character Longlisted for the 2020 moving image book award by the Kraszna Krausz Foundation as an accomplished author, consummate collector, and savvy insider, can John Kobal tell the story of the man who invented Hollywood? Cecil Blount DeMille 1881-1959, Kobal narrates the story of Demille's life and follows the director's career from his first film, The Squaw Man, in 1914, through the seventy films he directed, culminating with the ten Commandments in 1956. Before his death in 1959, even that first film received an enthusiastic response from the public and that popular enthusiasm would follow Demille throughout his career. Demille got his start by observing a film being shot once standing for hours on a box looking through a window watching every move made by the director, players, and cameraman. From that humble beginning, he mastered the craft of directing and created one of show business's greatest careers; autocrat and artist. Demille immersed himself totally in each picture he directed and demanded complete fealty from his casts and crews. Demille was said to know more about what the American public wanted than anyone else. In Hollywood, he pushed the boundaries of censorship and audiences responded by forming long lines at the box office from the American West to ancient Egypt. He created such magical films as the Crusades and the greatest show on earth that brought vividly to life fantasies perfectly suited to post World War I and mid-20th century America. DeMille describes Demille's impact on Hollywood as a director and showman. He argues that this master filmmaker stands for something largely lost in American filmmaking--a sort of naive, generous, big-thinking self-confidence. A belief that all things are possible. John Kobal wrote over thirty books on film and photography. His final manuscript, the lost world of Demille, was completed shortly before his death in 1991. It is published at last by University Press of Mississippi. A heart-stopping adventure tale featuring a brilliant scientist, one as insufferably pompous as Doyle's most famous character and his unlikely trio and its apocalyptic sequel in 1912. The creator of Sherlock Holmes introduced his readers to yet another genius adventurer, Professor Challenger, who in his very first outing would journey to South America in search of an isolated plateau crawling with iguanodons and ape men. A smash hit, The Lost World would be adapted twice by Hollywood filmmakers and it would go on to influence everything from Jurassic Park to the TV show Land of the Lost. Its 1913 sequel, The Poison Belt, finds Challenger and his dino-hunting comrades trapped in an oxygenated chamber as the entire planet passes through a lethal ether cloud. Edward Malone, a young reporter for the Daily Gazette, asks his editor for a dangerous assignment to impress his wife, Gladys, who wishes for a great man capable of brave deeds and actions. The task is to approach the notorious Professor Challenger, who dislikes the popular press intensely and physically assaults intrusive journalists. The subject is to be his recent South American expedition which surrounded controversy and guarantees a hostile reaction as a direct approach would be instantly rebuffed. Malone instead masquerades as an earnest student on meeting the professor. He is startled by his intimidating physique but believes his ruse is succeeding. Seeing through the masquerade, then confirming Malone’s scientific knowledge is non-existent, Challenger erupts in anger and forcibly throws him out. Malone earns his respect by refusing to press charges with a policeman who saw his violent ejection into the street. In this astute mix of cultural critique and biblical studies, John H. Walton presents and defends twenty propositions supporting a literary and theological understanding of Genesis 1 within the context of the ancient Near Eastern world and unpacks its implications for our modern scientific understanding of origins ideal for students, professors, pastors, and lay readers with an interest in the intelligent design controversy and creation evolution debates. Walton’s thoughtful analysis unpacks seldom appreciated aspects of the biblical text and sets a bile believing scientists free to investigate the question of origins. The books in the Lost World series follow the pattern set by Bible scholar John H. Walton, bringing a fresh close reading of the Hebrew text and knowledge of ancient Near Eastern literature to an accessible discussion of the biblical topic at hand using a series of logic-based propositions. She finds that a significant number of printers independently developed similar responses to the deskilling of their craft and the threat of unemployment demonstrating a widespread consistency in themes and expressive forms in the printers’ occupational narratives. Holtzberg Call shows that what once served as the printers’ rhetoric of tradition is now their rhetoric of displacement. Initiation rites long apprenticeships a complex and peculiar jargon and a gallery of legendary figures once bound hot metal printers into a specialized highly regarded occupational folk community. The hot metal printed lore has survived in an exemplary form that functions as a source of reconciliation with the demise of their craft. Holtzberg Call analyzes how and why the printers’ traditionalize and idealize their work experience drawing parallels between the shift from mechanical to computer typesetting and an equally disconcerting transition in the nineteenth century when linotype deposed handset type. She also shares her knowledge of the many aspects of hot metal printing culture from the life of the tramp printer to the meanings of various printing terms to the operation of a linotype machine. One gains a sense of the conditions in the old type shops where long hours, excessive heat, and poorly ventilated fumes from solvent ink and molten lead were the crucible in which camaraderie, pride, and fulfillment were forged. An award-winning author and veteran mountain climber takes us deep into the Southwest backcountry to uncover secrets of its ancient inhabitants in this thrilling story of intellectual and archaeological discovery. David Roberts recounts his last twenty years of far-flung exploits in search of spectacular prehistoric ruins and rock art panels known to very few modern travelers. His adventures range across Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, and southwestern Colorado and illuminate the mysteries of the ancestral puebloans and their contemporary neighbors: the Mogollon and Fremont as well as the more recent Navajo and Comanche. The Lost World of DeMille 2019-10-25 Longlisted for the 2020 moving image book award by the Kraszna Krausz Foundation as only an accomplished author consummate collector and savvy insider, John Kobal tells the story of the man who invented Hollywood, Cecil Blount Demille. He was one of the most influential directors and producers in Hollywood history. Kobal narrates the story of Demille's life and follows the director's career from his first film, The Squaw Man in 1914 through the seventy films he directed culminating with the Ten Commandments in 1956. Before his death in 1959, Demille received an enthusiastic response from the public and that popular enthusiasm would follow Demille throughout his career. Demille got his start by observing a film being shot once a day, standing for hours on a box looking through a window watching every move made by the director, players, and cameramen. From that humble beginning he soon mastered the craft of directing and created one of show business' greatest careers. Autocrat and artist, Demille immersed himself totally in each picture he directed and demanded complete fidelity from his casts and crews. Demille was said to know all about what the American public wanted. He pushed the boundaries of censorship and audiences responded by forming long lines at the box office from the American west to ancient Egypt. He created such magical films as the crusades and the greatest show on earth that brought vividly to life fantasies perfectly suited to post-war America. John Kobal describes Demille's impact on Hollywood as a director and showman and argues that this master filmmaker stands for something largely lost in American filmmaking - a sort of naive generous big thinking self-confidence. A belief that all things are possible. John Kobal wrote over thirty books on film and photography, his final manuscript the Lost World of Demille was completed shortly before his death in 1991. It is published at last by University Press of Mississippi.
