love is bound to complicate everything but he's not sure he has another option these thousands and tens and twenties of thousands of American young men badly wounded all sorts of wounds operated on pallid with diarrhea languishing dying with fever pneumonia. Open a new world somehow to me giving closer insights new things exploring deeper mines than any yet showing our humanity. I sometimes put myself in fancy in the cot with typhoid or under the knife tried by terrible fearfulest tests probed deepest the living soul's the body's tragedies bursting the petty bounds of art. So wrote Walt Whitman in March of 1863 in a letter telling friends in New York what he had witnessed in Washington's war hospitals. In this we see both a description of war's ravages and a major artist's imaginative response to the horrors of war as it bursts the petty bounds of art in the real war will never get in the books. Louis Masur has brought together fourteen of the most eloquent and articulate writers of the Civil War period including such major literary figures as Nathaniel Hawthorne, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Frederick Douglass, Herman Melville, Walt Whitman, Henry Adams and Louisa May Alcott drawing on a wide range of material including diaries, letters, and essays. Masur captures the reactions of these writers as the war was waged providing a broad spectrum of views. Emerson, for instance, sees the war come as a frosty October which shall restore intellectual moral power to these languid dissipated populations. African American writer Charlotte Forten writes sadly of the slaughter at Fort Wagner. It seems very very hard that the best and noblest must be the earliest called away especially has it been so throughout this dreadful war. There are writings by soldiers in combat. John Esten Cooke

"Hoofprints on the Canadian" is a book made up of several short stories about the life and times of African Americans in the West. Each story has its own hero and villain, and the thing that ties them together is the attempt to showcase African Americans in a different light. The stories prove that the color of a man's skin will not tell you if he is good or bad; it also will not tell you if he is brave or heroic or if he is a sniffling coward. Several of the stories depict black outlaws who take on the character of Robin Hood; these are men who strike a blow against society on behalf of the downtrodden.

Several stories deal with love and expose it to be what it really is: something that drives men to the brink of insanity and yet they cry out for more. It also deals with the common man who is forced into the limelight simply because he is at the wrong place at the right time. Most of these stories are set in the Indian Territory, now the state of Oklahoma. They help to showcase the rich racial makeup of the state, the fact that all of these men are basically the same, some good and some bad.

"Hoofprints on the Canadian" is a title that was conceived by the author at the tender age of twelve. It has traveled around the world, sometimes in print and other times in the dark recesses of his mind. At last, these stories will be brought to light for the world to share. To truly access these stories, all you have to do is follow the hoofprints left in the... three classic must-read novels from New York Times bestselling author Brenda Jackson's The Protectors series collected here in one volume for the first time. Forged in desire when good girl Margo Connely becomes Lamar Striker Jennings's latest assignment, she knows she's in trouble and not just because he's been hired to protect her from an underworld criminal. The reformed bad boy's appeal is breaching all her defenses and as the threats against her increase, Margo isn't sure which is more dangerous: the gangster targeting her or the far too alluring protector tempting her to let loose. Though Striker's now living on the right side of the law he's convinced his troubled past keeps Margo out of his league, but physical chemistry explodes into full-blown passion when they go on the run together. Surrendering to desire could be a deadly distraction or finally prove that he's the only man qualified to keep her safe and win her love. Seized by seduction from the moment his eyes meet hers across the crime...

The passion of Robert E. Lee and the puritan streak in Cavalier J. E. B. Stuart are only two of the surprises in Alf Mapp Jr's highly regarded psychological analysis of Confederate military and political leaders. In this beautifully written book, Mapp also brings to life the defensively genteel Jefferson Davis, the paradoxically bold retreater Joseph E. Johnston, the amazingly transformed Stonewall Jackson, and the mysterious and astonishingly durable Judah P. Benjamin. Mapp’s first-rate scholarship, fresh insights, and exciting prose have made frock coats and epaulets essential reading for a generation of historians and readers interested in the Civil War. Revised and with a new introduction and updated bibliography, Mapp’s classic study of the men who led the Confederate rebellion against the United States will appeal to a whole new generation of Americans.

When an earth-shattering secret has two legs, a big mouth, and a blinkered determination to get home by any means necessary, it’s up to Daisy and Aidan to stop it from happening by any means necessary. One of the best cozy mystery series I’ve ever read, come and meet our... feisty red heroine and find out why she’s such a hit with readers from feeling like they were back in the eighteenth century daisy and aidan are thrust very much into the twenty first century answering a desperate call for help they find themselves embroiled in a crazy chase across the county to stop a secret going public that must never hit the front pages this time the puzzle is the whereabouts of a missing scarecrow and the question of just how he intends getting home our story is different in another but just as scary a way too our intrepid heroes are separated and neither knows where the other is for aidan an encounter with an old friend proves frighteningly enlightening while daisy discovers evidence he could well be in mortal danger and there isn’t a lot of time to save his life or the situation neither of them realise the secret they’re chasing is hardly the secret they thought it was as an ever increasing number of friends and enemies join the battle for the same pot of gold the yellow brick road starts to look more like a four lane highway and the end of the rainbow seems to be ever further away who will be the first to make emerald city in one piece with the spoils just out of sight over the horizon that’s anyone’s guess the terrifying tale of the homesick scarecrow is the fifth book in the hilarious daisy series and like the others is not exactly what you might expect check out the whole series and everything else we create on the r t green website and enjoy than any yet showing our humanity I sometimes put myself in fancy in the cot with typhoid or under the knife tried by terrible fearfulest tests probed deepest the living soul's the body's tragedies bursting the petty bounds of art so wrote Walt Whitman in March of 1863 in a letter telling friends in New York what he had witnessed in Washington's war hospitals in this we see both a description of war's ravages and a major artist's imaginative response to the horrors of war as it bursts the petty bounds of art in the real war will never get in the books Louis Masur has brought together fourteen of the most eloquent and articulate writers of the Civil War period including such major literary figures as Nathaniel Hawthorne, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Frederick Douglass, Herman Melville, Walt Whitman, Henry Adams and Louisa May Alcott drawing on a wide range of material including diaries, letters, and essays Masur captures the reactions of these writers as the war was waged providing a broad spectrum of views. Emerson for instance sees the war come as a frosty October which shall restore intellectual moral power to these languid, dissipated populations. African American writer Charlotte Forten writes sadly of the slaughter at Fort Wagner: it seems very, very hard that the best and noblest must be the earliest called away especially has it been so throughout this dreadful war there are writings by soldiers in combat. John Esten Cooke, a writer of popular pre-revolutionary romances serving as a Confederate soldier under J. E. B. Stuart, describes Stonewall Jackson's uniform: it was positively scorched by sun: had that dingy hue the product of sun and rain and contact with the ground but the men of the old Stonewall brigade loved that coat and John De Forest a Union officer describes facing a Confederate...
