in a letter to boccaccio petrarch extolled the virtue of poetry and letters for promoting an understanding of both human nature and morals the letter was designed to console him after hearing a prediction that he was soon to die and that he ought to renounce poetry the prophecy came from an elder renowned for his piety but petrarch admonished that too often dishonesty and fraud are couched in religious sentiments nothing not even death according to petrarch ought to divert us from literature for petrarch virgil was the source for understanding how literary studies not only promote eloquence but enhance morals if anything literature dispels the fear of death the claims of this volume is that it may be the case that the virtuous life can be achieved by those ignorant of letters but a more direct and certain route is guaranteed by a devotion to literature the collected works in this new volume of the transaction series religion and public lifeheeds petrarch s advice that literature not only orients us to life s developmental stages it can provide us with a more complete understanding of the human character while artfully advancing morals to this end michelle darnell s opening chapter entitled a new age of reason explains how existentialism is an argument for how literature can take on philosophical form not as formal argument but as persuasive narrative over the objections of even those who study sartre darnell uses sartre s the age of reasons a model and shows how his literary output was a legitimate philosophical inquiry in addition to the darnell piece the volume boasts a series of outstanding and innovative works by scholars in the field taken together as a whole these authors not only illustrate the moral consequences of an original choice but oblige the reader to explore the ramifications of such a choice in one s own life henri bergson 1859 1941 was one of the great philosophers of our era whose concept of creative evolution continues to dominate a large area of modern thought in bergson’s view the world includes two opposing tendencies life and matter life is dynamic has force and will and struggles for richness and complexity through and beyond matter matter is the congealed residue of creation that has already taken place and according to the laws of nature is in a gradual state of erosion morality and religion bergson shows in the present book may be regarded in similar terms they partake on the one hand of a static principle combining nature’s heritage and the accrual of past forms and a dynamic principle through which morality and religion remain always in crisis always alive to contingency and growth in the course of this study bergson inquires into the nature of moral obligation into the place of religion and the purpose it has served since primitive times into static religion and its value in preserving man from the dangers of his own intelligence into dynamic religion or mysticism as a manifestation of the life force and a means of producing man’s forward leap beyond the limits of the closed society for which nature intended him and into the open society which is the brotherhood of man unedited summary from book cover contemporary philosophers have grown increasingly skeptical toward both morality and moral theory some argue that moral theory is a radically misguided enterprise that does not illuminate moral practice while others simply deny the value of morality in human life in this important new book louden responds to the arguments of both anti morality and anti theory skeptics in part one he develops and defends an alternative conception of morality which he argues captures more of the central features of both aristotelian and kantian ethics than do other contemporary models and enables the central importance of morality to be convincingly reaffirmed in louden’s model morality is primarily a matter of what one does to oneself rather than what one does or does not do to others this model eliminates the gulf that many anti morality critics say exists between morality’s demands and the personal point of view louden further argues that morality’s primary focus should be on agents and their lives rather than on right actions and that it is always better to be morally better i.e. it is impossible to be too moral part two presents louden’s alternative conception of moral theory here again he draws on the work of aristotle and kant showing that their moral theories have far more in common than is usually thought and that those features that they share can be the basis for a viable moral theory that is immune to the standard anti theory objections louden reaffirms the necessity and importance of moral theory in human life and shows that moral theories fulfill a variety of genuine and indispensable human needs

Morality and Modernity 2012-11-12 normative subjects alludes to the fields of morality and law as well as to the entities self and collectivity addressed by these clusters of norms the book explores connections between the two the conception of self that informs this book is the joint product of two multifaceted philosophical strands the constructivist and the hermeneutical various schools of thought view human beings as self creating by pursuing our goals and promoting our projects and so while abiding by the various norms that guide us in these endeavors we also determine human identity the result is an emphasis on a reciprocal relationship between law and morality on the one side and the composition and boundaries of the self on the other in what medium does this self creation take place and who exactly is the we engaged in it the answer suggested by the hermeneutical tradition provides the book with its second main theme like plays and novels human beings are constituted by meaning and these meanings vary in their level of abstraction self creation is a matter of fixing and elaborating these meanings at different levels of abstraction the individual the collective and the universal a key implication of this picture explored in the book is a conception of human dignity as accruing to us qua authors of the values and norms by which we define our selves individually and collectively
