putting together the first canadian domestic science textbook popularly known as the little red book in newspaper city phillip gordon mackintosh scrutinizes the reluctance of early torontonians to pave their streets he demonstrates how toronto s two liberal newspapers the toronto globe and toronto daily star nevertheless campaigned for surface infrastructure as the leading expression of modern urbanity despite the broad resistance of property owners to pay for infrastructure improvements under local improvements by laws to boost paving newspapers used their broadsheets to fashion two imagined cities for their readers one overrun with animals dirt and marginal people the other civilized modern and crowned with clean streets however the employment of capitalism to generate traditional public goods such as concrete sidewalks asphalt roads regulated pedestrianism and efficient automobile is complicated thus the liberal newspapers promotion of a city of orderly infrastructure and contented people in actual toronto proved strikingly illiberal consequently mackintosh s study reveals the contradictory nature of newspapers and the historiographical complexities students of the press with comprehensive and critical coverage of the most important debates in the study of newspaper journalism from ethics and investigative journalism to political economy and the future of the industry given the shifting boundaries and central importance of newspapers it will be of interest to all students of journalism and the media praise for the journalism studies key texts series it is easy to describe a good textbook for a specific journalistic format the ideal book has to satisfy a list of requirements that are also bullet pointed in journalism assignment outlines a text has to synthesize the existing body of knowledge explain concepts clearly have a logical order of topics and provide enough information and directions to pursue further study one may also hope it would include real life examples and be lucid vivid and a pleasure to read hard to find not anymore the new sage series journalism studies key texts satisfies the main requirements on the list carefully planned and meticulously edited by martin conboy david finkelstein and bob franklin the textbook series is a welcome contribution to the literature of journalism studies all three books follow the same structural template an overview of historical development explication of the political and economic frameworks within particular types of journalism a review of contemporary practices social demographics a comparative analysis of practices around the world a summary of main conceptual approaches an indication of future directions recommendations for further reading this strong organization resembles a template for a course outline this is intentional because the series is aimed both at students and their practice based lecturers who often come straight from industry and need time to adjust to the academic environment the series achieves its aim to bridge the sometimes too evident dissonance between journalism theory and practice they successfully situate discussions about journalism in social and historical contexts we see the faces of individual journalists the circumstances of news production the relationship with owners the battle between the public service and the profit nature of news the relevance of journalism work the detailed account of the conditions under which newspaper radio and alternative journalism is produced and performed make the journalism studies key texts series mandatory reading for both journalism students and their lecturers verica rupar journalism studies a major survey of the english newspaper and the way it developed The commercialization of news in the nineteenth century traces the major transformation of newspapers from a politically based press to a commercially based press in the nineteenth century. Gerald J. Baldasty argues that broad changes in American society, the national economy, and the newspaper industry brought about this dramatic shift. Increasingly in the nineteenth century, news became a commodity valued more for its profitability than for its role in informing or persuading the public on political issues. Newspapers started out as highly partisan adjuncts of political parties as advertisers replaced political parties as the chief financial support of the press. They influenced newspapers in directing their content toward consumers, especially women. The results were recipes, fiction contests, and features on everything from sports to fashion. Alongside more standard news about politics, Baldasty makes use of nineteenth-century materials, newspapers from throughout the era, manuscript letters from journalists and politicians journalism and advertising trade publications government reports to document the changing role of the press during the period he identifies three important phases the partisan newspapers of the jacksonian era 1825 1835 the transition of the press in the middle of the century and the influence of commercialization of the news in the last two decades of the century
